

Dear friends,

after I have had a big success with the concert at Berlin I had to notice that the big shutdown has begun. Even I could fly back home again I received a lot of cancellations for my planned concerts for the next months. Indeed, as every other musician I had to realize that there will be no more possibility to be on stage – and no one knows when we can play again. Though I understand very well that it is necessary to support every social distancing against the infection with Corona virus, these are sad days. We all musicians do not know when we will play again for you. I am very looking forward to seeing you again on concerts and festivals. In between I will plan new projects and try everything to stay in contact with you. So, stay tuned and visit my site from time to time to be informed when we start again. Stay healthy!

Yours sincerely,

Layla
